

The Granger Dinosaurs

The dinosaur project was physically started around April 1994.

The idea was actually mentioned a couple years earlier at a community planning meeting. At those meetings the agenda was to create a community theme and come up with something to revitalize our Main Street and downtown area. Several ideas were offered: a Spanish/Mexican theme, historical preservation with the old brick buildings etc...

In the early part of 1994, the Town's Public Works Department was given the challenge of producing something along the lines of a dinosaur theme. The Public Works crew was in varying degrees responsible for the community float which had taken top honors all over the Northwest for three-four years prior, so this project was well suited for their abilities.

The first dinosaur constructed was the baby brontosaurus. Public Works experimented with the construction process and has very much refined the steps in completing one of these creatures.

As of 2017, the City of Granger is home to 33 dinosaurs. Join us, the first Saturday of June, each year for Dino-n-a-Day, and help create the newest member of the Granger dinosaur family.
